

"Norah Tokoupil" appears to be a name derived from the well-known CBS journalists Norah O'Donnell and Tony Dokoupil, who are colleagues and have co-anchored special coverage together. The name itself is likely a combination or a slight misspelling of the two names.

- Norah O'Donnell is an American television journalist who is a senior correspondent for CBS News and a contributing correspondent for 60 Minutes. She previously served as the anchor of the CBS Evening News and co-anchor of CBS This Morning.
- Tony Dokoupil is an American broadcast journalist and author. Since 2019, he has co-hosted the CBS morning program CBS Mornings. [3, 4, 5, 6, 7]

They co-hosted special news coverage, such as for a solar eclipse, and O'Donnell has posted on social media about being live with Dokoupil. [1, 2]

The name "Norah Tokoupil" does not appear to be a distinct person.

[1] <https://www.facebook.com/CBSNews/videos/watch-total-eclipse-of-the-heartland-at-2-pm-et/742648857955302/>

[2] <https://twitter.com/NorahODonnell/status/1777410476567105994>

[3] <https://www.leadingauthorities.com/speakers/norah-odonnell>

[4] https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tony_Dokoupil

[5] https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Norah_O%27Donnell

[6] <https://www.cbsnews.com/team/norah-odonnell/>

[7] https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tony_Dokoupil